Oklahoma bomber Tim McVeigh, Unabomber Ted Kaczynski and World Trade Center mastermind Ramzi Yousef are taking aerobics classes together!

WORLD TRADE CENTER bomber Ramzi Yousef. 6 people killed.

By MICHAEL FORSYTH / Weekly World News

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Birds of a feather flock together — especially jailbirds!

Three evil, murderous fanatics whose cowardly and bloodthirsty campaigns of terror made them the most notorious men in America are now taking a daily exercise class together behind bars!

Oklahoma bomber Timothy McVeigh, Unabomber Ted Kaczynski and World Trade Center mastermind Ramzi Yousef share one-hour workouts in the courtyard of the escape-proof "supermax" prison near here.

While building up their strength and flexibility the trio — who've blown up 177 innocent people between them — exchange thoughts on everything from their favorite meals to the latest movies, which the killers get to see for free on cable TV in their cells.

Yousef's attorney Bernard Kleinman told The Dallas Morning News that his client and McVeigh chat about "food, the weather, movies or whatever.

"I know they have cable TV and they watch movies and he's talked to McVeigh about the movies they've seen."

Unabomber Ted, who spent years living alone in a remote cabin, is still somewhat of a loner as he is "there physically," but rarely joins in on the animated discussions, Kleinman said.

The men spend 23 hours a day locked in solitary confinement at the Administrative Maximum Facility, America's highest-security prison, but thanks to a recent lawsuit filed by Yousef, the explosives-loving pals get to spend an hour a day keeping fit.

When the three kill-crazy convicts get together, they rarely argue, despite their extremely different points of view. And it's no wonder the boys get along so well — they've got a lot in common.

McVeigh was convicted of murder for an April 1995 truck bombing that leveled the Oklahoma City federal building, killing 168 people. Yousef was convicted of planning the February 1993 World Trade Center bombing, which killed six. And Kaczynski pleaded guilty to an 18-year mail-bombing spree that took three lives and left several other people maimed.

Despite their past violence, the kindred spirits are not using their time together to plot a breakout, escape, or work on a fresh conspiracy. Kleinman reassures the public.

He said it's simply a matter of a bond developing between people who are "in a similar circumstance" and who have "no one else to talk to."

THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS broke the bombers' story.

GEORGIA WOMAN SUFFERS FROM RARE 'MERMAID DISEASE'

'I believe God has a purpose for all of us, and since I was born so different, I guess He must have something really special in mind for me'

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — Courageous Doris Frundale faces each day with joy and good humor, despite the fact that she's afflicted with polysyngamatakis, or "mermaid's syndrome" — a rare birth defect in which the legs are fused together from the waist all the way down to the feet!

By KEVIN CREID
Weekly World News

The skin of the legs is dry and extremely thick and discolored.

The skin tapers down and ends in a flap of skin where her feet should be.

Doris, 38, is living proof that we can be happy in life no matter what kind of cards Nature deals us. The independent optimist owns and operates a highly successful mail order business. She likes clubs and goes for long walks in the woods.

But that doesn't mean she's lonely.

"I have all the friends a person could ask for," she told Weekly World News. "And they'd do anything for me.

"But I promised myself early in life that I would never be a burden to anyone, and God has helped me keep that promise."

Doris has consulted more than a dozen surgeons and all have told her that her condition is irreparable.

They have, however, been able to make a small incision that allows her to go to the bathroom without a colostomy bag.

Like the legendary half-woman, half-fish creature for whom the disease is named, Doris gets around using an elongated wheelchair and drives a specially equipped van from her home to the post office, malls and markets.

But also like her mythical counterpart, Doris is able to swim extremely well and spends five hours a day in her private pool. But there's a price. She must apply skin creams six times a day.

"My body can't seem to manufacture enough emollients to fully moisten my skin," she says, "so it gets very dry and painful.

"The water from the pool feels good while I'm in there, but it's just symptomatic relief. Ultimately it tends to dry my skin even more. So I'm sort of damned if I do and damned if I don't.

"That's why I need to apply the creams."

Anyone else facing life with this painful and breakish defect might be bitter and cynical. But Doris is just the opposite.

"Doctors tell me only one out of every 15 million people have mermaid's syndrome," she says. "So I'm pretty unique.

"I believe God has a purpose for all of us, and since I was born so different, I guess He must have something really special in mind for me."

INTERNET LOVE STORY ENDS IN HEARTBREAK — & SUICIDE!

SUICIDE VICTIM JULIE YASA.

By JACK ALEXANDER / Weekly World News

FARMINGTON HILLS, Mich. — A romance that blossomed on the Internet ended in tragedy when heartbroken Julie Yasa apparently committed suicide after her cyberspace lover used her for sex and dumped her, cops said.

Alone, lonely and an ocean away from her home in Paris, France, the despondent 32-year-old woman probably died of an overdose of sleeping pills that cops haven't ruled out foul play.

Her body was found March 3 by her Internet lover in some words across from the apartment complex where he lives.

Police haven't released her lover's name, but said he is 31, single and a recent college grad who works for a computer company.

"The night before her body was found, the young man watched her walk into the woods in freezing weather knowing she was suicidal and did nothing to stop her," said Police Chief William Dwyer.

"He didn't call 911 to her behalf. He didn't take her to a hospital. He didn't try to get her help. He had sex with her and then kicked her out of his life," said Chief Dwyer.

"In my 37 years in law enforcement, I've never seen anything as cruel and inhumane as cold-blooded."

The couple had communicated on the Internet for about six months before Julie flew from Paris to Pittsburgh last December to visit the cyber lover she'd never met. For some unknown reason, she was and was again denied access by the INS, though French officials said her passport was valid.

Julie later flew from Paris to Amsterdam to Toronto, Canada, where she finally got to meet her Internet friend, the man with whom she hoped to spend the rest of her life.

"They had sex and he returned to Michigan," Chief Dwyer said. "She flew from Toronto to Windsor on Valentine's Day and paid a man $150 to smuggle her across the border to Detroit in his car."

Lovestruck Julie showed up at her paramour's apartment in his Detroit suburb on February 27. They had sex and he told her she couldn't stay with him. When she threatened suicide, he drove her to a nearby motel the next morning, cops said.

"He told Julie she wasn't what he was looking for," the chief said.

Julie stayed at the motel two days and returned to his apartment the night of March 1, saying she had swallowed a bottle of sleeping pills.

"He didn't want her dying in his apartment, so he claims he dropped her off at the entrance to his apartment complex and drove away," Chief Dwyer said.

When cops asked the young man why he hadn't done more to get help for his suicidal friend, Chief Dwyer said he replied:

"I didn't feel comfortable with the idea of her killing herself. But I believe, sir, if someone wants to take their own life, that's their choice."

THE WAY YOU USE YOUR TELEVISION REVEALS YOUR PERSONALITY

By JUNE LAWYER
Weekly World News

The way you use your television reveals a lot about your personality, says a noted expert.

Here are some basic kinds of TV-watching behavior — and what they say about the true you.

● "If you automatically turn on the TV the moment you enter your home, you are a very energetic and dynamic person who craves continuous stimulation," says social psychologist Dr. Fred Koenig. "Turning on the TV as soon as you walk in is your way of maintaining a constant connection with the outside world."

● If you rarely check the TV listings, and prefer to watch your favorite shows at the same time every day or every week, you are very faithful and dependable in your relationships with others.

And your loyalty to real-life friends extends to the make-believe characters who appear on your favorite shows.

● If you frequently check the TV listings before deciding what program to watch, you're a very open-minded person who craves fresh stimulation. By checking the TV listings, you're able to keep up with one time movies, miniseries and specials.

● If you always turn off the TV when company arrives, you are a true extrovert. For you, people always come first.

You have both feet solidly planted in the real world. Others think of you as thoughtful, considerate and tactful.

● If you leave the TV on when you have guests, you're assertive, strong-willed and independent.

Your home is your castle — and you refuse to alter your viewing habits.

● If you frequently watch two programs at once by flipping back and forth between channels, you feel compelled to check out all of life's possibilities. You like to comparison shop before making significant purchases and are constantly looking for a better deal.

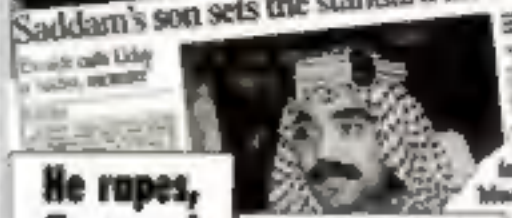
SADDAM HUSSEIN'S SON IS A SADISTIC TORTURER . . . insiders reveal!



EVIL Uday's exploits are making headlines all over America.

He rapes, flogs and mutilates — just for the fun of it!

By MIKE FOSTER
Weekly World News

Iraqi madman Saddam Hussein's son Uday is a chip off the old block, prison insiders say — a sadistic, torture-loving, sexually depraved, power-hungry maniac!

Nicknamed by citizens The Beast With a Human Face, he routinely rapes female prisoners, cruises the streets of Baghdad for girls as young as 10 — and has even subjected his own mother and sister to unspeakable sexual abominations.

Rumors of Uday Hussein's greed, brutality and sick sexual appetite have been whispered in Iraq for years, and now a top former aide has come forward to confirm that his ex-boss is a living demon.

Akram al-Jasabi worked for Uday as a personal secretary for 15 years before the ruthless son of Saddam turned on him and he was forced to flee the country.

"Uday is a sadist, a monster," al-Jasabi told a reporter in London, where he has taken refuge. "I've seen him laughing when he had a man dragged to death."

Another time al-Jasabi saw Uday personally torture an underling who had mishandled a minor business dealing, he revealed.

Gleefully, Uday beat the victim with a stick on the soles of his feet — then hung him from a revolving ceiling fan and savagely whipped him with an electric cable.

But twisted 30-year-old Uday, Saddam's heir apparent and the second most powerful man in the country, takes a particular delight in the sexual abuse of female prisoners, other sources say.

"When he sees a pretty woman on the street, he'll have her arrested on a contrived charge. Then he visits her cell and personally monitors her torture," said an other former prison insider. "As part of the 'interrogation' he rapes and sodomizes the women repeatedly — often to death."

The Butcher of Baghdad's sicko son also has a habit of following little girls home, then seizing them for his sexual use, the insider added. "When he snatches a poor child, people know that they must surrender their daughters or be shot on the spot."

UDAY Hussein (A) forced his mother (B) and his sister (D) to perform unnatural sexual acts while Saddam (C) looked the other way.

regular basis and even forced his own mother to submit to an unnatural act, the insider said. Saddam reportedly was aware of the lordess — but was too scared of his out-of-control son to intervene.

Kill-crazy Uday, who has ordered at least 35,000 executions, has become even more vicious and unpredictable since surviving a 1996 assassination attempt that left him with a permanent limp and a badly scarred face.

He's also a drug addict who has been known to go on rampages after popping pills and drinking heavily, the insider said.

Uday's reign of terror has made him many enemies, and he has survived at least two other assassination attempts, the insider said.

Saddam's other son, Qusay, is also a sadistic monster, but he is more cautious and less flamboyant than Uday, the insider said.

Uday's sister, Raghad, fled Iraq with her husband, Saddam's cousin Hussein Kamel, in 1995 after Kamel had Uday's henchmen torture him for refusing to divorce Raghad. Kamel returned to Iraq in 1996 and was executed.

Uday's mother, Sajida, and his sister Rana remain in Iraq, where they are forced to live in fear of Uday's violent temper.

Uday's wife, Saddam's daughter Nadia, fled Iraq with her children in 1996 after Uday had her father's bodyguards beat her with clubs and rifle butts.

Uday's brother-in-law, Kamel, was executed after he returned to Iraq

HAS THE YEAR 2000 COME & GONE?

Some theologians think so!

Worried about all the fearsome things that have been predicted for the new millennium? Well, stop worrying. The year 2000 has already come and gone!

That's right. Few people realize that our modern calendar, which supposedly starts on the day Christ was born, has been proved to be off by at least four or five years.

In other words, Jesus was already 4 or 5 years old in the year we call "Year One."

The discrepancy occurred way back in the 6th century when Pope John I asked a monk named Dionysius Exiguus to determine the exact date of Christ's birth.

Dionysius probably did his best but we now know he made some algebraic calculations.

For instance, we know from the Book of Matthew that "Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king."

But today, modern historians and Bible scholars worldwide know that Herod died in the year we call 4 B.C. That means the calendar we've trusted since it was first created is off by at least four years.

Dionysius made some serious errors in his arithmetic. But to his day, few people had the mathematical knowledge to realize it.

No one is sure of the exact date Year One began. But we now know that Christ was 2,000 years old in either 1996 or 1997.

American Academy of Pediatricians wants to cut out circumcisions!

Circumcision is on the way out!

Medical opinions of the much-discussed baby boy snipping procedure have been swinging back and forth for generations — and now America's pediatricians have decided they don't think it's so great after all.

For years, The American Academy of Pediatricians was pretty much neutral on the procedure. But now they've come out and declared that doctors should stop recommending the controversial cut.

But don't think the newborn knife work is going to come to an abrupt halt.

In 1996 about 1.3 million baby boys were circumcised, while about 400,000 were left unaltered.

Shockingly, about half the kids who had the procedure didn't even get any form of pain relief.

The docs say any boy who is circumcised should get some form of analgesic pain relief.

The pediatricians didn't give circumcisions a full thumbs-down. They agreed that if a family wants to have their baby boy circumcised, the doctors should go ahead and do it.

A MESSAGE FROM

NASA RADIO TELESCOPE PICKS UP MYSTERIOUS TRANSMISSION FROM DEEP SPACE

By MIKE FOSTER / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — A giant radio telescope aimed into deep space to listen for signals from extraterrestrials has received what seems to be an actual communication from God, according to a hush-hush NASA memo.

And the message from space — a blindingly complex chain of mathematical code that took two years to decipher — appears to be a warning that strtoyed in fire just as foretold in the Holy Bible!

As painstakingly translated by scientists with the aide of computers, the message reads:

"The days of Earth are soon buried. Spread these words so many can prepare. For out of fire will come Paradise and the righteous shall prosper and become the seeds of the new millennium."

The mystery message, which appears to come from the constellation Pegasus — "a message from so shocking that it has been withheld by NASA officials fearful of sparking nationwide panic.

But an internal memo detailing the findings was leaked to astronomer Dr. Gary Wiederhorn, of Washington, D.C., who in turn has made it available to the press.

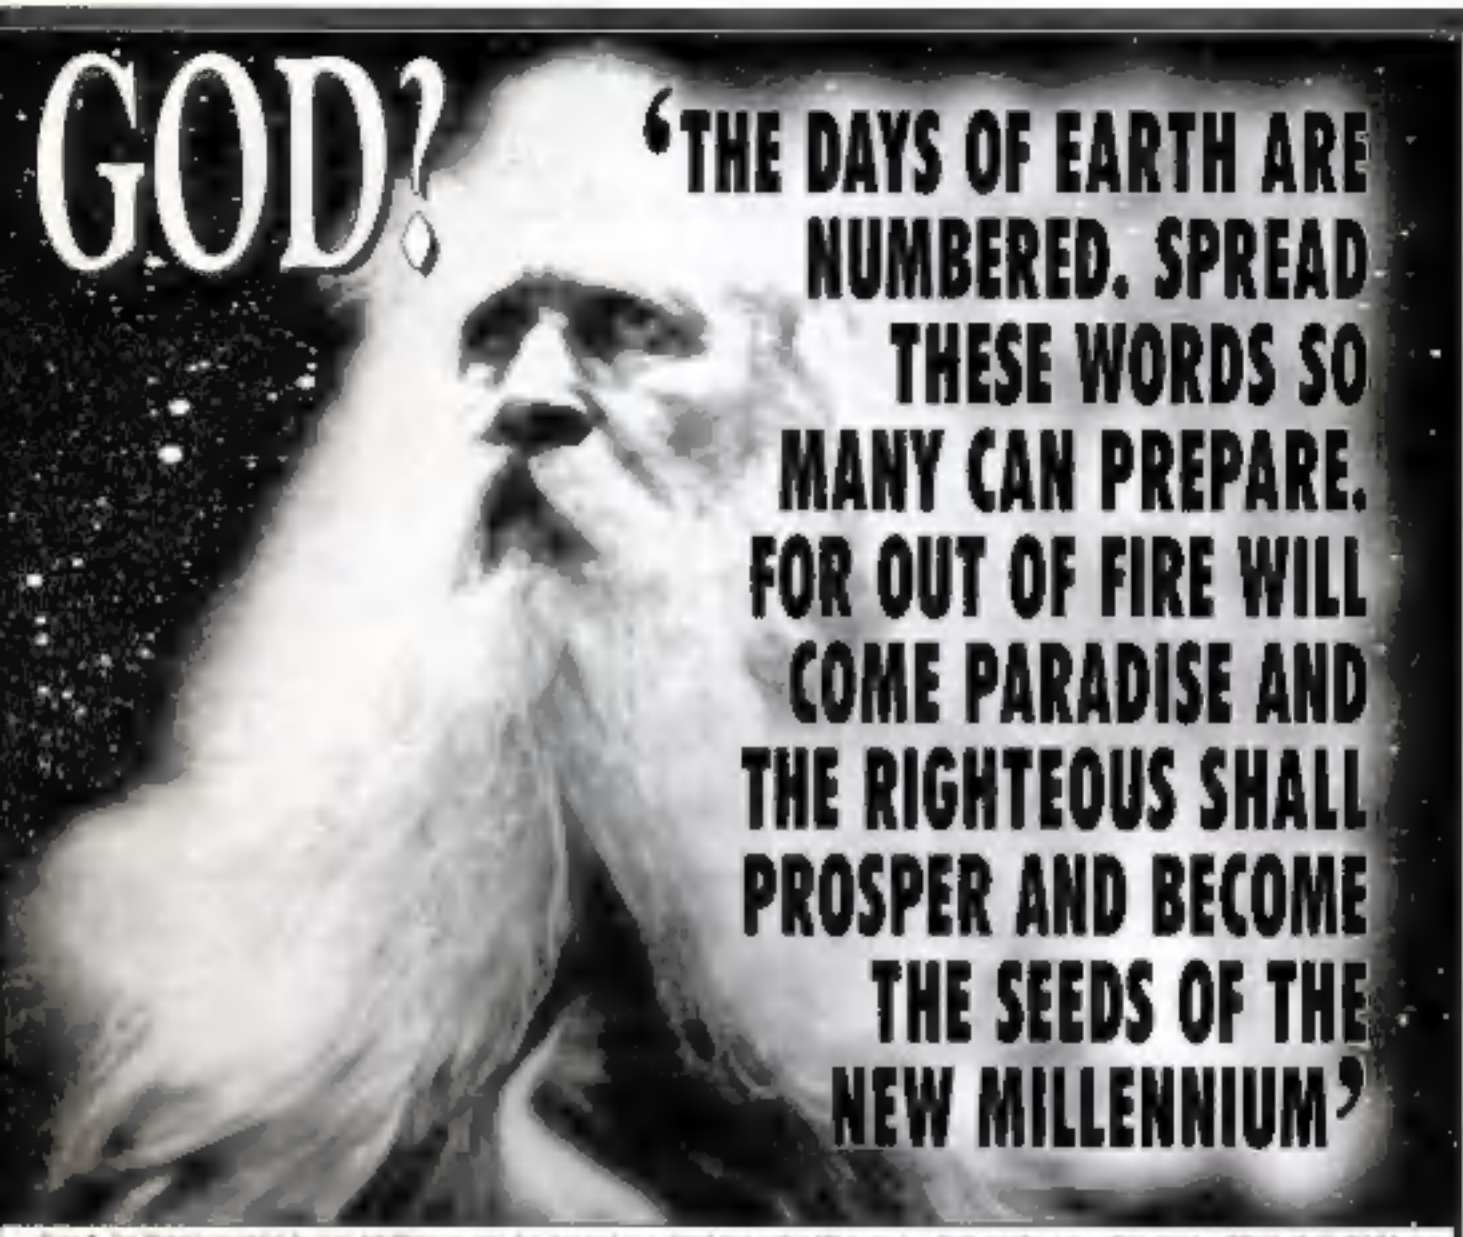
"If the message has been correctly interpreted, the implications are simply breathtaking — and frightening," he declared. "It is like something from the Book of Revelation.

NASA officials refuse to confirm or deny the existence of the alleged memo.

But religious leaders say that the findings, if confirmed, are extraordinary.

Said Fr. Antonio Guardini, a highly-placed Vatican insider: "This very well could be a message from God Himself, telling us to prepare for the Coming of Jesus and His day of Judgement.

"If so, this is wonderfully good news, for it confirms church teachings that the righteous who survive the Apocalypse will enjoy the fruits of Paradise under the rule of our Lord."



Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence "SETI" program — formally known as the High Resolution Microwave Survey — in 1993 when budget-slashing senators derided a hunt for intelligent alien life in the universe was a waste of time and money.

But a number of SETI-type projects have continued, refuting some that are privately funded — as well as a relatively secret program funded under the table by NASA.

"NASA scientists felt they knew better than the politicians," said Dr. Winterhorn. "Even intelligence was too important to abandon."

The project uses several of the world's largest radio telescopes to scrutinize the sky 24 hours a day, examining the microwave portion of the electromagnetic spectrum in a search for artificially produced signals — anything similar to our own TV or radio broadcasts.

"Theoretically, any signal measuring less than 500 megahertz couldn't occur naturally — it would have to be artificially produced," explained Dr. Winderham.

Excited government scientists picked up a signal measuring 120 megahertz. When analyzed, it was found to be a series of high and low electronic pulses similar to Morse Code.

The pulses corresponded to a series of numbers, beginning "00-01-00-10-00-11 ..." and continuing for a total of 150,000 figures.

"Obviously it was some kind of binary code — and the first few thousand numbers were devoted to teaching the language to the recipient of the message," said Dr. Winderham.

Just weeks ago, after two years of relentless effort, NASA cryptographers succeeded in translating the message and presented their interpretation to stunned space agency officials.

"When my NASA source told me what the message said, I thought he was pulling my leg," recalls Dr. Winderham. "When I realized he was serious, I nearly fell out of my seat.

"This has to be the most important development in science since the splitting of the atom."

Other experts who've been shown the memo downplay the "First of all, NASA may be mistaken — this is in all likelihood interstellar static that, through mere chance, appears to be the product of intelligent design," said a skeptical MIT scientist.

"Secondly, NASA may have misinterpreted the message.

"Third, we have no reason to believe the message is accurate. It may simply be the ravings of some end-of-the-world loony on another world, hurling his message into space because no one

HOW TO TELL IF YOUR WEIRD NEIGHBOR IS A SPACE ALIEN!

By MIKE FOSTER
Weekly World News

Most seemingly harmless next-door neighbors could be pawns in a vast alien conspiracy to conquer our planet, UFO experts warn.

An estimated 300,000 Americans nationwide are now under alien control, according to a chilling report from the Washington UFO Research Group in Washington, D.C. "Some individuals are willing collaborators, working for the invaders in the hope that they will be allowed to survive when the new order is established," the report reads. "Others are victims of mind control, forced by implanted microchips to do their masters' bidding." Here, from the experts, are nine telltale signs that the humans are suits of E.T.

● UNEXPLAINED WEALTH — Are your neighbors sudden-ly riding around in cars they can't afford, or getting in a pool? They could have agreed to sell the invaders in return for cash.

● STRANGE COMINGS AND GOINGS — Are odd sounds coming from your neighbors' house with strange cars and people appearing and disappearing? They could be smuggling in extraterrestrial weaponry or personnel.

● INVITATIONS — Has it been months since your neighbors entered you in their home? They could be hiding alien electronic gear.

● CHILDREN DISRESPECTFUL — Are your neighbors' kids unusually rude, resisting your authority as an adult? They may have been told by their folks that they don't have to obey because adults become you will become slaves in the new world order.

● GLASSY-EYED — Do your neighbors often appear to have blank expressions?

That's a classic sign that they are being controlled by alien implants.

● TIRED SPEECH — Is every thing that comes out of your neighbors' mouths a cliche, such as "Have a good, buddy?" Their personalities may be suppressed and an alien chip is only allowing them to speak from a limited standard script.

● ODD PATTERNS ON ROOF OR LAWN — Circular disturbances on your neighbors' front roof or lawn may have been left behind by a spaceship-shaped alien vessel.

● ELECTRONIC INTERFERENCE — Is your television and radio reception always going haywire? This may be caused by communication between your neighbor and the alien mother ship.

● BARKING PETS — Does your dog always bark at your neighbors? It may be that their brain implants are receiving high-frequency signals which are often irritating to dogs.

Remember: If you suspect that your neighbors are alien freaks, don't confront them — they could be dangerous. Immediately report the matter to a government agency such as the U.S. Air Force.

PAUL REVERE WAS AFRAID OF HORSES

Everyone knows that Paul Revere was the Revolutionary War hero who rode a horse from town to town warning that the British were coming ... but few know he was deathly afraid of horses. Revere had been terrified of horses after he was thrown from one when he was 11 years old.

RUSSIA DOES AWAY WITH DEATH PENALTY!

MOSCOW — Russia, which once executed children for exercising from murder to car theft, has decided to do away with the death penalty — calling it "too barbaric for a civilized country to tolerate."

Justice Minister Pavel Krasheninnikov said the new law could be signed by President Boris Yeltsin before the end of the year.

Q I was appalled to read about the way Madonna flaunted her body at the MTV Video Music Awards. How could she go out in that revealing dress? And what does her family think about her walking around nearly naked?

— Carrie B., Whitesville, Ga.

A Many fans who started to like the rebellious Material Girl when she first burst on the scene are now turning away in disgust at her increasingly outrageous behavior. Madonna's latest stunt has left her mother, Madge, the oldest of her seven children, totally speechless. "We're all shocked and embarrassed," Madge told a friend. "I don't know what's gotten into her. I've always been proud of her, but this is just disgusting. I don't know what else she can do to get attention."

Q As a devout Catholic I was upset to hear something about CNN founder Ted Turner making a snide remark about the Pope. What did he say?

— Mary D., Bronx, N.Y.

A The brash, outspoken media mogul got off some jokes about the Pope during a lavish, glamorous party in Washington. Some people who were there say Turner, who was drinking heavily, made the comments after he had been seated next to Pope John Paul II's sister, Sister Janina Tarnowska, a Polish nun who is a retired mother superior. Turner was overheard saying, "Get me a Polish nun detective!" Then he jokingly asked her to "pray for the right guy."

Within hours Turner, whose companies in the Atlanta area have a huge Catholic employee base, was aggressively backpedaling. He said he was only joking and that he has the utmost respect for the Pope. Turner, who has been married to actress Jane Fonda since 1991, has been criticized in the past for his caustic remarks about religion. He once referred to the Ten Commandments as "the Ten Suggestions" and has said that the Bible is filled with "boring parts."

Bill Clinton must like Pope with Polish pals!

Q Bill Clinton's daughter Chelsea and Kim Starr's daughter Caroline are both students at Stanford. I heard that after the inauguration, while in the President's hospital, Caroline got angry and gave Chelsea a piece of her mind.

Is there any chance of the situation escalating so much that the two will come to blows?

If so, shouldn't one of them leave the campus now?

— Donna R., Washington, D.C.

A There's plenty of bad blood between Bill Clinton and his opponents. Apparently neither Mary Matalin nor her husband, Democratic political strategist James Carville, are settled in the old Southwest yet — with a huge political fallout looming — and their daughters

Matalin and Alice were the members of a feuding sorority sitting before the two would establish the true, because her girl is no more.

Q Juliet Lewis is just terrible as her role as a man-eating, challenged girl looking for love in The Wonder Years. Worth better than in a couple of her last performances, in which she seemed really weirded out. I have to ask, but has she had a problem with drugs?

Q I thought that rocker Courtney Love had really cleaned up her act since she started doing movies and was going for a more family-friendly, Hollywood image.

So what's this about her performing topless on stage somewhere?

A The grunge-rock queen, who started in the Hollywood of Larry Flynt, hasn't completely abandoned her raunchy roots. While on tour in Australia, Courtney got down 'n' dirty. Down Under, Courtney bared her breasts before a howling, hollering audience.

"She then casually popped out and she sang with her usual pizzazz," said the bass guitarist for Courtney's

WOMEN BATTLE SEX-TOY SALES BAN IN ALABAMA!

BY JACK ALEXANDER
World Wide News

The law violates First Amendment rights by barring adults from engaging in legal [redacted] closed doors, say frustrated females!

BUNSVILLE, Ala. – Two women who sell sex toys and four women who use them are fighting Alabama's new obscenity law that bans the sale of vibrators and other love aids.

"This law is not only unconstitutional, it's ridiculous," said New York-based American Civil Liberties Union lawyer Mark Lopez.

"The politicians should have used a scalpel instead of a hammer if they wanted to pass a decent law.

"But they ignored the desire of people's private lives and walked right in."

The ACLU and the women have appealed the law to federal court, saying it violates First Amendment rights by barring adults from engaging in legal acts behind closed doors.

But the state contends there is no Constitutional right to a product used to produce an orgasm. Besides, they say the law doesn't say you can't use sex toys. It just says you can't buy them in Alabama.

Conservative groups in this Bible Belt state have sided with the law's sponsor State Senator Tom Butler, who says some of the [redacted] devices are "just trashy."

But Madison Mayor Chuck Vantrease said Butler is making a "classic knee-jerk reaction" of the state.

"If you want to dictate morality, become a minister," Vantrease said. "They (legislators) need to get on with running government and stay the hell out of people's bedrooms."

If enforced, the law could put Sheriff Williams and B.J. Bailey out of business. Miss Williams sells marital aids at her Pleasures "romance shops" in Huntsville and Decatur. Miss Bailey sells sexual aids at in home parties.

Sex therapist Dr. Alexander Taylor said marital aids are a vital part of treating people with sexual problems.

The aids help people regain and establish a consistent loving life together," Dr. Taylor said. "To say them as obscenity is to miss the point."

The sale of adult products such as sexual aids, X-rated movies and other sexually explicit material is a billion-dollar-a-year business in the United States.

Cops have delayed enforcing the new law pending a ruling by U.S. Judge Edward Smith on the constitutional challenge.

HOW TO KEEP A YOUNGER WOMAN FROM STEALING YOUR MAN

— even if you're over 40 and look like a dog!

Six surefire tips from an expert!

By MIKE FOSTER

FAMILY COUNSELOR Dr. Gail Majors

Good news for gals over 40! You can keep your man even if your looks have begun to fade, an expert says.

"Just because you've got a few wrinkles, your breasts are sagging and your butt hangs a few inches lower than it used to, doesn't mean you've got to turn over your husband to some sloppily 33 year old bimbo," declared Dr Gail Majors, a Washington, D.C. based family counselor.

Many men begin to develop a wandering eye when their wives reach middle age and the expert.

"But with a little imagination, flexibility and self-confidence, you can fight back and win."

Here, from Dr Majors, are seven great ways to hold onto your hubby when you're over the hill:

● MAKE HER HORNS SEEM CAMPY — A lot of women become panty as they reach mid life age and their mates leave the house in search of a more pliant partner. "Try to read hers and let him have his way more often," suggests Dr Majors. "Make him feel like a king in his castle."

● KEEP THE PAST ALIVE — There is a history he shares with you and no one else. Talk often about the "good old days" and keep plenty of photos around that show your happy sex times together.

● BE HIS BUDDY — Most men don't really have a best friend — the closest he has is you. Remind him that he can always confide in you, and honor that trust by never betraying his confidence.

● DIG INTO YOUR BAG OF SEXUAL TRICKS — Harness her many young wiles so don't really enjoy sex — while you are in your sexual prime. "While an inexperienced bimbo may think certain erotic acts are 'yucky,' you can remind your husband what the real woman is by treating him to a few 'taboo' acts the two of you have never tried before," says Dr Majors.

● COOK UP A STORM — The way to a man's heart really is through his stomach. Take a cooking course and brush up on your skills. No matter what happens, he'll always be home for dinner.

● REMIND HIM OF HIS AGE — Don't let Romeo forget that he's getting older, too. If you kid your mate enough about his bare belly and thinning hair, he'll realize that to the young hussies he's been drooling over he's just an old fogey.

● SCARE HIM OUT OF HIS WITS — Fear is what keeps most men faithful. Every time you read a new story about a man catching AIDS, being ripped off financially by a gold-digger or getting hooked to pieces by a psychotic Fatal Attraction type stalker, be sure to clip the item out and leave it where he'll be sure to "accidentally" find it.

BRITONS HAVE THE STINKIEST HOMES IN ALL OF EUROPE!

LONDON — Here's something these very proper British don't want you to know: They have the stinkiest homes in all of Europe!

A recent study reveals that almost all English people — 96 percent — have carpets in their houses that retain pet odors and tobacco-smoke odors.

And less than half of them do an annual spring cleaning.

By contrast, nine out of every 10 Spanish homemakers clean their homes every spring.

Lady urologist sues male patient — for exposing himself during hernia exam!

By GEORGE SANFORD / Weekly World News

MELBOURNE, Australia — In a bizarre sexual harassment case, a lady urologist is suing a male patient for allegedly exposing himself during a hernia exam!

Although the examination called for Hugh Gentry to lower his pants and underwear, Dr. Cara Wykester's sexual harassment lawsuit charges that he "recklessly and willfully" allowed himself to become aroused.

Being confronted by Gentry's full libido at full attention caused Dr. Wykester embarrassment and humiliation, the suit filed here last month contends.

And was unable to pursue her livelihood as a physician for several days, thereby incurring a substantial financial loss," the lawsuit states.

The strange legal drama began when Gentry, 36, was referred to Dr. Wykester for an examination for possible hernia.

believe her eyes. "She could see he was already somewhat aroused — and the effect was startling, because there was quite a lot of him, to put it delicately, to become aroused," she told a reporter.

During this time, Dr. Wykester's suit contends, "the defendant's state of physical arousal increasingly manifested itself."

Dr. Wykester says she was going to put the embarrassing episode behind her, until she mentioned the incident to another female doctor.

"Then I realized that I was not the only victim," she said. "I found out that he had done the same thing to two other women doctors a few weeks before," Dr. Wykester said.

Gentry would not comment on the pending suit at the advice of his attorney. But his lawyer says the house inspector was "taken totally by surprise" by the legal action.

Dr. Wykester is continued

There's no such thing as midlife crisis, says new study

Midlife crisis is a myth to most Americans, who say the years between 25 and 65 have been the best of their lives.

This is the portrait of middle age emerging from a 10-year study of 5,000 Americans by the MacArthur Foundation.

A majority said they had increases instead of well-being and a greater sense of control over their lives during the middle years. And despite the notion that most people go through a midlife crisis, the study confirmed earlier research that midlife crisis is the exception rather than the rule.

Only 23 percent of those surveyed reported a midlife crisis brought about by the realization they were aging or because of events that had nothing to do with aging.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Weekly World News

Men in the study felt more in control of their marriages than women, while women felt more in control of their sex lives. And most felt they weren't at complete control of their destinies.

Despite a high divorce rate in the United States, a majority of those surveyed said their relationships or marriages were stable and relatively happy.

Nearly percent said it was "not very likely" or "not likely at all" that their marriages or relationships would eventually break up.

The [illegible] did not [illegible] the [illegible] control [illegible] overcome belief that menopause was a difficult transition for women. A majority of post-menopausal women were relieved when their menstrual periods stopped and 3 percent reported feeling "really regret."

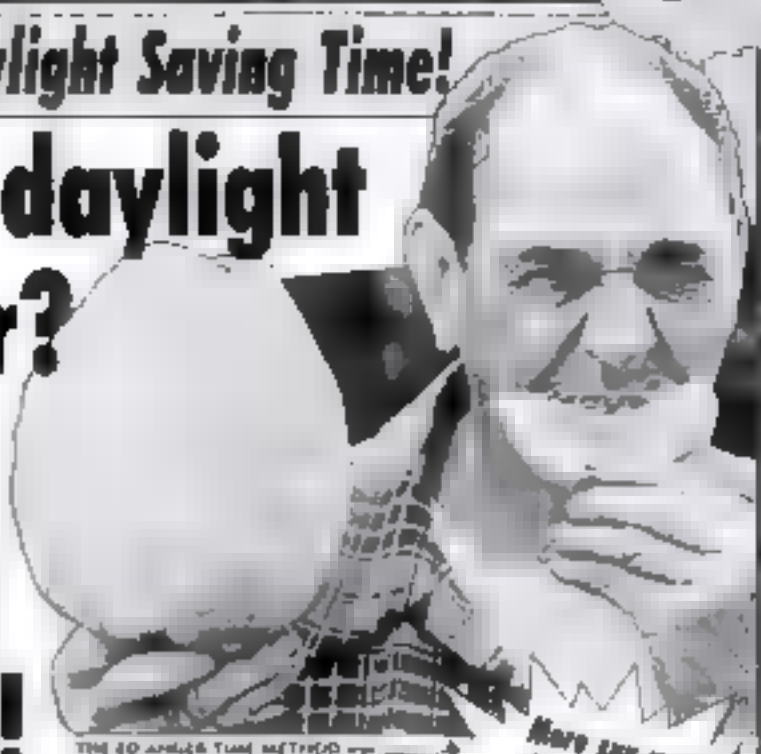
Twice as good as Daylight Saving Time!

Want more daylight this summer? Move your clock ahead TWO HOURS!



I just came up with a great idea to give everybody more hours of daylight this summer — and I'm calling it Ed Anger Time or EAT for short.

Instead of just moving the clock ahead one hour for Daylight Saving Time, I'm going to move my watch and clocks ahead TWO hours.

That means when I get off work at 5 o'clock it'll REALLY only be 3 o'clock — and that means nearly six hours of fun 'n' sun AFTER work, folks.

That's enough time to play a round of golf, mow the lawn and still have an hour or two of sun left for fishing every single day!

And just think of all the other things you can do with all that extra sunlight.

They'll be no big need for artificial lights.

Now, I know all this scientific stuff is complicated as hell for some people. After Einstein was working on the Theory of Daylight Saving Time when he died and even he never completely figured it out.

But trust me on this — my time-saving formula will work like a charm, if done properly. You don't have to get a headache thinking about it and it's as simple as pie to get started.

Let's say you've moved your clock ahead ONE hour for Daylight Saving Time and you would like to begin getting advantage of ... [illegible] ... STARTER.

Just turn your watch and clock hands AHEAD one more hour and there you've got Ed Anger Time.

If you get on Ed Anger Time and find you don't like it that extra daylight after work, simply MOVE the hour or the EAT after Daylight Saving Time is over.

But the greatest thing about Ed Anger Time is that it gives you the flexibility of being on both times at once.

Let's say you want to work on regular Daylight Saving Time. Simple. Just set your wristwatch by the office or factory clock.

That way you'll always know when the boss is coming or going.

You can keep your home ... [illegible] ... clocks on Ed Anger Time and still ... [illegible] ... the benefits.

And to give all my fans out there a chance to ... [illegible] ... the Ed Anger Time Bandwagon, I'm going to make it official.

On Sunday, April 2 at 2 a.m. Eastern Daylight Time we all move our clocks ahead one MORE hour.

You won't believe how nice and wonderful those summer afternoons can be [illegible]

Here are Ed Anger Time's two main fruits and monster veggies!

Here's one more big reason there on Ed Anger Time! It's an idea whose time has come.

BLIND BOY DRIVES 40 MILES TO SAVE DAD!

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — A blind 14-year-old boy saved his father's life — by driving the gravely injured man more than 40 miles over mountain roads to get him to a hospital!

Harlan Wockmond, 41, was feeding the hogs at his remote ranch when the weathered old bluebull was kicked in the head by an unruly hog and knocked unconscious.

By RAMOT JEFFRIES

"I heard the whole thing happen and rushed to my father's side," said heroic seven-year-old Otis Wockmond, who's been totally blind since birth. "He was out cold and I could feel he was losing a lot of blood.

"The foreman and all the hands were in town for the day and the phones had been out all morning. So I knew it was up to me to get him to town."

With every ounce of his strength, the quick-thinking youth pulled his bleeding father onto the bed of their old pickup truck and climbed behind the wheel.

"I was scared to death, but I just started driving," Otis recalled. "I couldn't see the road, but I had all my other senses and I decided it was time to use them. After years of riding that road with my dad from the ranch to the city I knew every twist and turn almost by heart.

"I drove with the window open so I could listen for headlight sounds. Once or twice I felt the side of the truck graze the guardrail, but I jerked the wheel back in time to avoid going over.

"A couple of times I could hear people honking their horns and swerving at me.

"One guy yelled, 'Are you blind?' I tried to tell him, 'Yes,' but I was so tense and scared that I couldn't say a word.

'I couldn't see the road, but I had all my other senses'

"I finally made it to the edge of town and managed to attract the attention of a passing motorist, who rushed his wife and dad to the nearest emergency room.

Doctors say the rugged rancher was within 15 minutes of bleeding to death. His son Otis receives his heroic rescue effort, shown here he lifted his injured dad into their pickup and drove him to town.

Doctors say the rugged he was released two weeks later with no permanent damage.

"I'm lucky to be alive," Wockmond said. "I owe my life to my son.

"If I'd known what was going on, I would never have allowed him to risk his life like CENTRAL POINT, Ore. — Most people are aware of Seeing Eye dogs that lead the blind safely from place to place. But few realize there are also dogs that are specially trained to help assist the special needs of the deaf.

Dogs for the Deaf is a nonprofit agency that trains Certified Hearing Dogs and places them, free of charge, in the homes of the hearing impaired.

Helen Hudson, president and CEO of the agency, says Hearing Dogs are as useful to their owners as guide dogs are to the blind.

"Hearing Dogs are valuable in so many ways," Helen says.

"They're trained to alert their owners when smoke alarms or burglar alarms go off. The dogs let you know when someone is at the door, when someone calls your name or when the alarm clock or oven alarm goes off.

"They let mothers know when their babies are crying. They even respond when a prowler is trying to break in.

"Hearing Dogs have been credited with saving lives. One was even pushed out of the way of a speeding car. He never heard it coming — but his dog did.

"One woman's Hearing Dog [illegible] started [illegible] in her kitchen and she got out just in time."

Like guide dogs for the blind, Certified Hearing Dogs have total public access and can legally accompany their owners into stores, hotels and restaurants and on public transportation.

The agency acquires the dogs from animal shelters. They're selected for their intelligence as well as for their affinity for people. They're trained using love, affection and positive reinforcement.

The dogs are not only useful to their owners, "they're also wonderful friends as well," the Hearing Dog owner says of her dog. "The first thing I see when I wake up, and he is there when I close my eyes at the end of each day. We are so close — each dependent on the other."

Dogs for the Deaf trains and places about 40 dogs annually, all over America.

If you're hearing impaired and feel you could benefit from a Hearing Dog, you can contact Dogs for the Deaf at 10175 Wheeler Rd., Central Point, Ore. 97502 or E-mail them at dogsinthedeaf.org

TRAINED dogs give alert their deaf masters when the phone is ringing.

How Hearing Dogs help their masters

What better pet could a deaf person ask for? Here are just a few of the wonderful things these incredible Hearing Dogs do for their owners:

- Alert them when smoke alarms go off.
- Gently wake them when the alarm clock rings.
- Let them know when someone is at the door.
- Alert them if a prowler is trying to break in.
- Let them know when someone is calling their name.
- Let them know when the oven timer goes off.
- Make them aware of when the phone is ringing.
- Let mothers know when their babies are crying.
- Constantly listen for approaching traffic. They've even saved lives by pushing people out of the way of speeding cars.

DR. FEEL GOOD?

Respected physician performed breast and rectal exams on pretty WOMEN

. . . even if he was just treating a sprained wrist!

By MICHAEL FORSYTH · Weekly World News

BOSTON, Mass. — A respected doctor secretly abused his female patients over many years — often performing embarrassing procedures like breast and rectal exams when they came in for unrelated problems such as wrist and knee injuries, authorities say.

Dr. Marcus Ramos has been charged with seven counts of indecent assault and battery and one count of rape.

"The alleged victims are all adult women and all the incidents occurred in his office," Boston District Attorney's office spokesman James Berglund told Weekly World News. "He is charged with improper fondling of various parts of their bodies."

Patients say Dr. Ramos, 58, would make them strip naked even when their medical problem did not warrant it. "His procedures were out of the ordinary and in the wrong direction," said Berglund.

There was plenty of snooping and sneaking was under of the physician's office. In January 1992 the subject of cases from a dozen complainants in the area applied legal aid in Mayor patient that legal officials had simply postponed the investigation and the arrest of Dr. Ramos.

The doctor's license was suspended only after he was finally indicted on February 12. By the time the law was empowered from the medical school faculty of Boston University.

The alleged misdeeds came to light, Berglund said, after one of the physician's patients complained to police. Cops investigated and found the other victims — including a woman who says she was raped by the doctor as he examined a hip injury back in 1987.

Since the doctor's indictment was made public, at least two dozen other alleged victims have come forward, shocking even many of the investigating police men.

One former patient expressed a general feeling in that he the case.

As he approached the courtroom, the accused doctor looked grim as he and called out "Shame!"

The trial opened July 6th with the statement that a grueling cross-examination of other pain and he made that only male.

And the doctor may have been a sexual opportunity patient.

At least six more police officers have come forward to say they have complained of going to see the famous the prominent male or shoulder injuries and being forced to undergo intimate exams. No charges have yet been filed in these cases.

Dr. Ramos has pleaded not guilty and is free on $50,000 bail. Judge Jennifer Chase, the charges to be read, "I am innocent! I am innocent!"

If convicted of all charges, he could face up to 20 years behind bars.

How to bounce back from a bout with the blues

You can bounce back from a bout with the blues by developing the personality traits of people who know how to pull themselves out of the dumps.

By ANN VICTORIA
Weekly World News

"There are several key characteristics people need which will enable them to weather periods of stress and change," said psychiatrist Frederick Flach. "These traits can help you create a happier and more productive life."

Dr. Flach, author of the book Resilience, says the ability to recover from an emotional setback is flexible, independent, interested in a great number of things, optimistic and humble."

Ask yourself "what if" questions that will help you prepare for traumatic events such as loss of a job or a loved one. You can be more flexible when you take the time to consider your options and have some ideas stored in the back of your mind.

"Develop a less rigid attitude by trying new forms of entertainment, seeking out new associations and varying your schedule from time to time," Dr. Flach suggests. "Be open to changing rather than depressing."

Dr. Hoffman says you will become more independent when you take charge of your time and your finances.

"Don't rely on others to initiate activities," he said. "Make plans and invite others to join with you instead of waiting for them to come up with ideas."

To have a wider range of interests, "immerse yourself in a variety of activities. Get involved for the mere fun of it. Try to be optimistic," he added. "Never dwell on the past. Always look to the future and expect it to be better.

"To retain a sense of humility, don't expect too much from yourself," he said. "Be realistic in your goals and don't be afraid to laugh at yourself."

Hubby's gay brother keeps stealing all my lipstick!

CINDY in New York.

Dear Dotti: I've got a serious problem with my husband's fruity brother Sean. I don't mind the fact that he's gay — it's no skin off my back. But I do mind the fact that he's a brazen thief and steals all my damn lipstick. Every time he comes over to my house he finds some excuse to go into my bedroom. And when he leaves, things are always missing, especially my lipstick. I asked him about it and he denies stealing anything. But I know he's the culprit because he wears the exact same shades that I do. My husband won't say anything because he doesn't like confrontation. Help me, Dotti. Sean is no longer welcome in my home and I'll do anything to keep him away from here! — Cindy in New York

Dear Cindy: The quickest way to get a gay man out of your life is to confront him with the most terrifying prospect an optimistic sex with a girl. The bottom line? Invite Sean over when your hubby isn't home — and take off your clothes!

How can I get my co-worker to shut up?

Dear Dotti: I have a friend I work with on the midnight shift. Every time I start talking about something she has to do one better. If I get sick, she's had the same ailment — but worse. If someone compliments me, she gets mad and starts bragging about herself. If someone is talking with us, she butts in and turns everything into "me, me, me." I can't stand it anymore. How can I shut her up? — Fed Up in Texas

Dear Fed Up: Don't be spiteful. Since the first idea to top every thing you say, give her the silent treatment!

I'm short, fat and ugly — but gals ADORE me!

Dear Dotti: At 5-foot, 5-inch, 248-pound, ugly 35-year-old, I'm not exactly what you'd call a chick magnet. But so help me, I can't get more than 10 feet on my front door without women flocking to me. I've tried everything from dark glasses to ski masks but no matter what I do

COMPLIMENTARY

Dear Mr. Manners in Wisconsin: Cheers on the table, yes, beer bee-hinds on the table, no!

Dear Reporter in Connecticut: A $95 anyone would not purchase on their wedding night is beyond me.

Dear Brain-damaged in Kentucky: If you're expecting me to remember you, forget it!

Dear Humiliated in Nevada: Lots of women with donuts wore them under garages. Don't worry about it.

Dear Superman in West Virginia: Lifting a wheel

...ust off your helmet, don't ...hank to handle. Lifting a ...eight off your wife's lid ...asn't to not.

Dear Satisfied Housewife in Michigan: If a door-to-door salesman is the best you can do, go for it!

Dear Scared Kid in Pennsylvania: Whoever told you monsters live under beds is an idiot. Everybody knows they hide out in closets!

Dear Dreamer in Colorado: This is what bad grades when you go through life with your head in a fish bowl!

THOMAS in Oklahoma.

...never help me, Dot... I make even ...ake so much!' Thomas in Oklahoma

Dear Thomas: The ...tion to your prob... is as plain as the ...nose on my face! — ...e living in a fan...sy world. Before ...somebody locks you up:

Skinflint hubby gave me a toaster for my birthday!

I celebrated my 35th birthday yesterday and thanks to my cheapskate husband, I couldn't be angrier. Believe it or not, the fool gave me a stupid toaster. When I opened the box, I actually laughed out loud — thinking it was a joke. But after I looked all around and real-diamond brace... let under the toaster. I was mad enough to spit. I told my league — but deep down in side I was hurt. What would you do? Should I say some thing? — Sheila in Ohio

Dear Sheila: First, return the toaster for the cash. Then start wearing super sexy clothes and making all sorts of provocative comments — but don't give Mr. Scrooge any for AT LEAST three months!

How can I make myself as gorgeous as you are?

Dear Dotti: I've admired you for years, not only for your brains and wit, but for your magnificent inner beauty. I have often wondered how you manage to remain so youthful when the rest of the world is aging rapidly all around you. You are gorgeous — and I'd give anything to learn your beauty secrets. — Molly in Oregon

MOLLY in Oregon.

Dear Molly: To be perfectly honest: I've never done anything to maintain my personal good looks.

...didn't have the same plan for you!

You'd better apologize right now, Dotti!

Dear Dotti: A few weeks ago you wrote that used-car salesmen are thieves who have a license to steal! Well, my husband's a car salesman and he's as honest as the day is long. Just last week he sold his mother a [illegible] Deluxe — loaded — at his cost, which was $16,000. That car cost $15,000 when it was new! So you apologize — right now! — Anne in Georgia

May 14 — Solid days for important financial transactions.

June 20 — Dynamic people will give you an excellent plan.

GEMINI

(May 21-June 20)

You're overjoyed to make changes in your life. Don't. Stick to what you're doing and you'll profit. You'll feel people are trying to get in your way. Ignore them.

You'll get many social invitations. But don't overdo your socializing because this is a great time to discuss problems with your family.

You'll have several opportunities to earn extra money on the side. Don't appear too eager. Take the advice of a successful older man.

SPECIAL DAYS

April 17 — Work out important decisions with your family.

May 10 — Apply yourself favorably, but check with your advisor first.

June 7 — A lovely romantic time you'll long remember.

CANCER

(June 21-July 22)

This is the time for you to invest in solid human relationships.

Avoid putting off things at your work. Do your job extremely well. You will find fascinating new friends. Accept the offer of a new business contact for social interaction.

Put up with some abuse at home for the sake of peace. Make a special effort to keep children out of conflicts.

You'll make money with an expert businessman. Younger people will help you get ahead financially.

A jealous outsider will try to influence your romantic life with selfish, idle gossip.

SPECIAL DAYS

April 20 — You'll make new friends who will prove helpful here.

May 19 — Make your appreciation for past help you've received.

June 4 — Make your move on a major investment.

LEO

(July 23-Aug. 23)

This is a period of beautiful opportunities for you. Do not hesitate and you will be able to accomplish a great deal in your life.

Add something new to your social life. Use your Leo charm, but don't let your Leo pride prevent you from showing gratitude where it's due.

Join friends in charity work. Attend formal social functions. You'll acquire new prestige.

Children will be a delight, full of ideas and questions. Show them how fond you are of them. Put long-due money you finally receive into savings.

In romance, you'll receive much affection.

George Washington hated the paparazzi, too — the kind with a paint brush!

Today's pampered movie stars aren't the only ones who whine about being hounded by paparazzi — so did the father of our country. George Washington!

Of course, the paparazzi of Washington's time weren't the camera-wielding stalkers we hear about today. In Washington's day — back in the late 1700s — it was the portrait artist who pestered the rich and famous. During his presidency, Washington sat for 35 portraits and, according to recently published research by Lawrence L. Kinglsey, he hated every agonizing minute spent in front of these people.

In a letter, the man who "never told a lie" admitted he was "as restive as a colt in all the saddle" as these painters painstakingly worked away, trying to capture him on canvas.

He not only hated posing for the portraits, some of his letters seem to indicate he didn't think much of the artists as well. To one friend he wrote that he was "heartily tired" of the demands of "these weak of people" — an attitude reminiscent of that of today's stars toward the photographers who dog them for photos.

But our first President didn't have a lot of choice. The first real, practical camera wasn't developed until 1839.

As his second term began to drag to a close, however, Washington was counting the end of his patience. He began to limit the amount of time he spent posing for portraits.

Lastly, famed painter Gilbert Stuart had already had the opportunity to paint George Washington. There might be a big black spot on our U.S. paper, but the world's history was forever in its debt.

How You Can Have a Board-Flat Stomach & Slim Body

Sportsman Jack Armstrong, fitness expert, has revealed the methods professionals use to achieve a board-flat stomach and slim body in an enlightening interview. Jack reveals how you can lose your pot belly and remove excess fat from your body—even if other attempts have failed.

Q: Jack, what is your method for achieving a board-flat stomach?

A: To have a firm, trim, lean stomach you must first get rid of the layer of fat and flab over your abdominal muscles. You can do all the abdominal exercises in the world—but if you have a layer of fat over your abdominals, your stomach will never be flat and will always look out of shape.

Q: What about all those stomach exercise gadgets on the market? Do they help?

A: Most of them are a waste of money. They may help you build up your abdominals with those devices, you simply make your stomach look worse—because the fat then covers your abdominals makes your stomach look larger and puffier.

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure this out. That's why those machines are absurd—the more you exercise your abdominals the worse it can look.

Q: Jack, what do you recommend to flatten your stomach and get rid of excess fat?

A: I highly recommend a book called 3 Simple Steps to Flatten Your Belly. This book will help you flatten your stomach and remove excess fat from your body. This book tells you about nutritious foods that actually help burn fat from your abdominals, plus it reveals a unique exercise routine that works in conjunction with a powerful fat-burning process that helps remove ugly fat from your abdominals and the rest of your body. Once the fat is gone, your stomach looks lean and trim—and your abdominal muscles can actually be seen. Your clothes fit better and your entire appearance improves. If your stomach is not flat the rest of your body will never look good.

Q: Jack, what you are saying makes a lot of sense. How can readers get a copy of 3 Simple Steps to Flatten Your Belly?

A: You can order direct from the publisher. The book is only $12.95 (plus $1 p&h). To order, send name and address with payment to: Lamont Research Publishers, Dept. WB-15, 161 North Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, CA 92024. You may return the book within 90 days for a refund if not satisfied.

Where does hubby go when he sneaks out of bed?

Serena Sabak

Wanda, in Kansas City

Dear Serena: My husband sneaks out of our bed at night after I have fallen asleep — and won't tell me where he goes.

I've woken up a couple of times and found him missing, but when I ask him about it he gets mad and says I shouldn't accuse him of things. I found out one of those nights/days where there are usually male dancers appeared near our house a couple of months ago and I'm afraid he has been going there. Serena, please tell me where he has been going. I don't care how bad it is — I have to know. — Wanda in Kansas City

Dear Wanda: Your husband has a serious gambling problem and has been dealing with some very dangerous men. He is playing in illegal, overnight poker and blackjack games and the games are fixed so he can never win. Tell your husband you know where he has been going — and encourage him to get the professional help he needs.

Dear Serena: I am in desperate need of your help. I lost my wedding ring on the last day of my honeymoon in Jamaica. I looked everywhere for it but couldn't find it before we had to come home. The last time I remember seeing it on me was when I was on the beach, so I'm afraid it's gone for ever. If there is any way you can let me know who found it, I would pay a huge reward to get it back. — Kate in Louisville

KATE in Louisville

Dear Kate: You'll be delighted to hear the ring fell off when you were packing a gift in Jamaica to send to your mother. She received the gift but didn't notice the ring. Thankfully, she hasn't thrown the box away, so call and tell her the ring is at the bottom of the box.

Dear Serena: Help me. I'm afraid to go anywhere or even show my face in public because of the possibility that I might be arrested. I don't want to go into all the details here but trust me when I say I'm not guilty. Are the police looking for me? Will I be arrested suddenly and sent to jail? — Petrified in Kansas City

Dear Petrified: You are going to be arrested. It will never work out but please don't take off running — that would only make it worse for you when you get caught. The smart thing for you to do is tell the police everything you know about the crime. You won't have to do time as prisoner if you are honest with them.

KELLY in Greenville

Dear Serena: Did my wife and I have such other in our German lives? We are extremely close and feel like we can read each other's minds just about all the time. We both agree that we probably knew each other before we were even born. Can you give us the details? — Kelly in Greenville

Dear Kelly: Actually you and your wife were related to each other in a former life. But don't worry, you were not cousins or that relationship doesn't affect your marriage now. But I will tell you, you two have had an eye on each other since back when you were quite young.

Dear Serena: How did my real friends but tell if what she would talk and tell me but where she can't. I believe that you are the only person who will be able to help me. — Pat

Lover in Vienna

Dear Pat Lover: Someone can steal your man's tool with a car. The good news is the mistake has made you a lot more careful about taking chances when it comes to the heart.

Dear Serena: Why is it that my world is so full of bad luck? Just when I think I'm about ready to turn the corner in my life and start heading toward success and happiness, I get smacked right between the eyes with a big dose of misfortune. Will my luck ever end? — Beth in Waycross

BETH in Waycross

Dear Beth: By the time you read this your luck will already have changed. Congratulations on your new job and your upcoming marriage. And please invent your financial windfall wisely.

What is your worst marriage trait? The Orient may help! It's a very good tool to decipher. Here's the key to revealing your marriage.

If the number of letters in your first name is 5 or less, subtract that number from 7. If there are more than 5 letters in your first name, subtract the total from 13.

Now take the result and find your key letter in the word ORIENT above. Starting at the upper left corner of the box below, check each one of your key letters to it opposite from left to right. The letters below each of your key letters spell out a secret message for you.

THIS WEEK'S SIX LUCKIEST LOTTERY NUMBERS:

CLIP & SAVE or YOUR VALLEY!

Weekly World News has predicted numerous winners in the world's most successful newspaper — and we are proud to claim that six hundred lottery numbers were used!

The Swiss-built computer called Bright Green, has the ability to calculate which lottery numbers are most likely to come up each week, based on previous performance and complicated mathematics. The numbers are good for the week the report is on the newsstand.

The computer uses all numbers selected in lotteries across America over the past year to provide a projected base for predicting future results. More value is given to the most recently selected numbers.

Two riders killed in crash during mini-motorcyle race

THOUSANDS of racing fans gather every weekend to watch the mini motorcycles speed around the track at 45 m.p.h.

By SANDRA LEE

MILAN, Italy — In the worst tragedy in the history of miniature motorcycle racing, two riders were killed when they wrecked in a violent head-to-head collision!

The rare accident stunned a crowd of more than 4,000 spectators who gather every weekend to watch racers whip around the track on motorcycles not more than 14 inches tall.

Worst tragedy in the history of the sport, say officials

Finding fault with others will just make YOU feel worse, says expert

By finding fault with others, you just make yourself feel worse, say psychologists.

Instead look for people's good points and you'll give your own spirits a boost.

"When you're critical of others, it means you don't feel good about yourself and you're trying to rub your distress off on them," says Dr Celia Hales, co-author of I've Done So Well, Why Do I Feel So Bad? "But it doesn't work because it comes right back to you."

Dr Neal Oakes agrees. "By criticising others you're actually doubling your misery and ruining your fun," he said. "The world becomes a depressing place for you."

By KELLY TURNER
Weekly World News

Often, people criticise others in order to cover their own self-esteem — but this only makes them feel worse, said the experts.

"What began as a method of putting yourself above others becomes a habit that spreads like a virus to how you look at your own behavior and your own lifestyle," said Dr Oakes, author of the book Depression: The Secrets of Feeling Good.

"You become obsessed because through your body language, facial gestures, voice tone and through your comments, other people begin to avoid you. And worst of all, you become alienated from yourself."

"What's the solution? First, recognize what you're doing. Then look for the positive in other people.

"When you start looking for the positive in others, the negative will become unemphasized," said Dr Oakes.

"And you'll begin to feel better about yourself as well. It will make you happier and psychologically healthier as well."

Added Dr Hales: "Getting rid of the habit of finding fault is one of the best ways to stay feeling successful."

Skinny-dippers stop charging hippo with their boozy breath

OSIECKI, Poland — Two teenagers got so plastered they went skinny-dipping in the hippopotamus pool at the local zoo. But the normally aggressive hippos ran for cover rather than attack the invaders — because they couldn't stand the boys' boozy breath!

"These young men are lucky they reeked of alcohol or our hippos would have had them for lunch," said zookeeper Andrzej Kobylinski.

"But the way they smelled

SATAN PUTS DOWN REVOLT IN HELL

ILLUSTRATION shows what Hell may actually be like

. . . claims monk in Rome newspapers

By VINCENZO SARDI Rome, World News

Satan is still in charge of Hell — after foiling a coup attempt led by one of his right-hand demons!

That is the bizarre claim of Antonio Dellaporta, a defrocked Franciscan monk who says he learned of the turmoil down below during a near-death experience.

"I died and visited Hell before being revived by doctors," said the former Brother Antonio, who was kicked out of the order six years ago for embezzling church funds.

"While I was there I found that Lucifer's domain is like a third-rate banana republic."

Dellaporta, who wrote of his experiences in a Rome tabloid, got word that he made the astonishing discovery after suffering a recent heart attack and losing consciousness.

"I felt my spirit leave my body — then I fell sharp-clawed hands pulling me down into an abyss. The next thing I knew I was in a place of darkness and surrounded by the anguished screams of the damned. There were naked men and women all around me writhing in pain as they labored among the flames. I realized I was in Hell."

The ex-monk was hauled before Satan and ordered to begin work. "I expected to be given specific orders, but there was a lot of confusion. It was so dark, you couldn't even see who was talking," he recalled. "I just tried my best to look busy."

When he looked around, he says, he saw a scaly, horned giant hanging from his ankles by chains and being tortured with spears. Curious, he asked his fellow prisoners who it was.

"I was told it was the demon Astrodeus, one of the highest ranking princes of Hell," he said. "They told me he and three other demons were being punished for trying to overthrow Satan.

"The rebels thought that Lucifer had been running things long enough. They had gained a lot of support because they promised to improve conditions in Hell."

But apparently you have to get up pretty early in the morning to outsmart Lucifer — the coup attempt had failed and the ringleaders were rounded up for punishment.

Before Dellaporta could learn more about the situation, he felt himself being pulled out of the place of dark cries and back toward his body.

"I woke up on a table in an operating room, surrounded by doctors," he said.

Most adult Americans are married

WASHINGTON -- Despite the recent rash of TV shows about partying singles and unwed mothers, most adult Americans are married and living with their spouses.

Approximately 110.6 million Americans over 18 — or 56 percent of the adult U.S. population — are married and living with their mates, the Census Bureau reports.

SEX NIGHTMARE!

Pretty teen makes every man she meets instantly aroused — because of her scent!

By MIKE FOSTER / Weekly World News

SEATTLE, Wash. — Tragic teen Heather Loughlin can't attend high school, go to church or even ride the bus — because she emits an undetectable scent that makes every male she goes near have a powerful sexual reaction!

"It's like a nightmare. I sometimes feel like a freak," says the heart-

17-year-old who is battling a rare hormonal condition that overproduces the pheromones that drive the men wild.

"Every mature human female emits pheromones which have no detectable scent when mixed with air. These potent perfumes elicit a sexual response in males," explained a specialist who has examined the teen. "Heather's body is producing very high concentrations of these perfumes. It's like a pheromone factory — working at full capacity."

While some looking at Angelique Heather is a devout Christian just like her mother. Mary Sue Loughlin, who has been helping her daughter to cope with the embarrassing disorder.

"Heather is a very devout young lady who has chosen to remain celibate until marriage, which can't come soon

Shocking new scientific finding:

CAVEMEN CUSSED LIKE SAILORS!

By RANDY JEFFRIES

PHOENIX, Ariz. — More than 50,000 years ago, cavemen used spoken language to communicate with one another — and they swore like drunken sailors!

In fact, fully half of the words and phrases they used would, by today's standards, be considered profane.

That's the conclusion of two noted experts on Neanderthal man whose research supports recent discoveries by Duke scientists.

The Duke University researchers announced last April that tiny canals found in fossilized skulls of Neanderthals indicate that they had the nerve complex needed to manage speech.

PSYCHOLOGIST
Dr. Marilyn Calderon.

...agents who doubt that man had the capacity for language as that point in his evolution.

But noted linguist and psychologist Dr. Marilyn Calderon of Phoenix and Spanish anthropologist Dr. Juan Ruiz of Madrid say that language not only existed in the Neanderthal era but also that the language was filthy and obscene.

"The skull fossils I've examined show that primitive man could manage the complex motor movements necessary to produce speech," Dr. Calderon said. "But what overwhelmed me was the sophistication. The higher brain centers clearly evolved so that these people felt not only hate, defecate and reproduce. What I'd like to know is what they have to say about God, brotherhood, love and happiness."

...grew that Neanderthals were intelligent enough to use the...
...have been deaf and dumb with crude gestures.

"I am certain they spoke with one another."

But the most shocking revelation came from Dr. Calderon, who said that language was used almost exclusively for the worst.

"Two words adequate that Neanderthal man knew," Dr. Calderon said. "Fuck, meaning copulate, and shit, meaning defecate. The higher brain centers clearly evolved so that these people felt not only hate, defecate and reproduce. What I'd like to know is what they have to say about God, brotherhood, love and happiness."

...start day of fear. Every day they faced uncertainties and danger — the danger of not getting enough food or of getting eaten themselves. Their only defenses were the elements of the weather.

Even as psychologists have. Calderon explains, angry. So they probably did what angry people do today. They probably swore a blue streak.

Still, although there are indications that they believed in a god, the chances are they blamed this trouble deity for all their misfortunes and probably used his name in vain frequently.

There is little doubt that Neanderthal man would not be welcomed into polite society today.

The researchers, reporting in the Journal of the American Medical Association, concluded that good muscle strength in middle age can give a man a margin of safety in later years, although there are indications that they believed in a god, the chances are they blamed this trouble deity for all their misfortunes and probably used his name in vain frequently.

There is little doubt that Neanderthal man would not be welcomed into polite society today.

LOTTO

By R. NEALE UNO / Weekly World News

Nothing stirs the imagination more than the idea of winning a multimillion-dollar lotto jackpot.

Even people who don't play the lottery regularly find themselves daydreaming about what they would do if they hit those magical winning numbers.

Weekly World News has brought its readers hundreds of thrilling lotto stories over the years. Here are some of the most exciting ever published anywhere. They run the gamut from how the lucky winners head to spend their newly won fortunes to the two unfortunate people who dropped dead after their numbers were chosen.

There's the fascinating story of how our forefathers — including George Washington — used lotteries to raise money.

You'll learn how to tell if you're a "lottery junkie" and read the touching story of a man who gave a $6 million lottery ticket to his brother. Read these and other amazing stories in this our Lottery Spectacular.

Lottery fever spreads across the globe

Lottery fever is spreading like wildfire across the United States, but Americans aren't alone in their passion for the high-stakes game of chance.

Some 78 countries around the world have lotteries — and they rake in a mind-boggling $134 million every day.

Recent single-game payouts range from $1 million in Germany and $18.5 million in Switzerland to $187 million in Canada.

And in the U.S., lottery pots have topped $100 million.

With lottery games in 37 states as well as Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, the U.S. leads the pack. When New York became the first U.S. state to establish a lottery in 1967, Spain's game of chance was already 244 years old.

And Portugal started its own lottery 10 years after Spain in 1776. Austria set up a lottery in 1787 and Yugoslavia in 1890. Of the 12 European countries with lotteries, Norwegians shell out the most, $236.97 per person yearly while Poles spend the least, just $2.13 per person.

Here's how much was spent per person during 1990 in some other countries with lotteries:

Angola, $4.96; Australia, $81.87; China, 13 cents; Israel, $111.93; Japan, $124.99; Kenya, only 3 cents; Mexico, $2.84; New Zealand, $72.62; Panama, $4.87; Philippines, $1.50; Singapore, $59.50; Spain, $59.50; Sweden, $59.50; Switzerland, $59.50; Thailand, $59.50; Turkey, $59.50; United Kingdom, $59.50; Uruguay, $59.50; Venezuela, $59.50; Yugoslavia, $59.50.

Though Americans also play lotteries run by foreign countries, there are laws against selling cash, money orders or checks through the mail to play for tickets. It's also illegal to send lottery tickets across state lines or international borders.

"There are a number of companies that will purchase lottery tickets for buyers and they advertise in several gambling magazines," said I. Nelson Rose, author of the book, Gambling and The Law. "But the only legal way to buy lottery tickets in other states is through credit card purchases. Buying lottery tickets through these means is very risky since you never actually see the tickets. How to tell if you're becoming a lotto junkie!

Lottery junkies don't just gamble away their money — they're throwing away their happiness, too!

But you can tell if you're becoming addicted to the lottery — and take steps to head off disaster, according to Dr. Maureen Lobpool, nationally recognized authority on gambling.

You show signs of being a real lottery junkie if you:

- Make special trips that are inconvenient just to purchase lottery tickets.
- Start feeling you truly do have "lucky" numbers.
- Buy increasing numbers of lottery tickets as weeks go by.
- Find a sense of excitement building with each subsequent lottery drawing.
- Become uneasy if you're away from the lottery [illegible] more than [illegible] disappointed [illegible] when you don't win.
- Get surprised to hear your spouse or friends complaining about how much [illegible] spend on lottery tickets.
- Begin [illegible] patterns to help you select lottery numbers.

Have you a lottery junkie right here around the house?

Dr. Lobpool made these suggestions:

- Take a general history of your feelings. Those playing the lottery make you feel sad? Do you feel the lottery has a negative impact on your life?

[illegible] on the edge of becoming addicted to the lottery — [illegible] — then you should give [illegible] the initiative to stop playing or [illegible].

- Set up a lottery budget. First set aside enough money to make sure that all your bills are paid then set aside a small amount of income for lottery playing — and stick to it.
- Replace buying lottery tickets with another thing to do. So pinpointing you've been meaning to do for a long time. See a movie or start a project.

If you find playing the lottery is taking away some of your happiness rather than adding to it, then you should consider doing something about it," Dr. Lobpool said.

Man gives brother $9M lottery ticket — AFTER it wins!

Earl Hedrick picked up the phone at the general store, dialed his brother Elwood and said: "Come on down. I think I've won some money for you on the lottery."

When Elwood arrived at the store, he expected to see a tall whitter Elwood Earl grinned and handed him a winning lottery ticket — worth an incredible $9.94 million!

And when one of those two hit the big jackpot, Earl [illegible] the lucky winner scheduled to receive $450-a-month installment payments — asked the directors of the [illegible] to cancel the checks and issue a lump-sum payment of $9 [illegible] so he could give it to his brother who had made the lucky guess.

Earl didn't hesitate. He went right to the people and told them [illegible] handed over the ticket.

"I laughed and said, 'Yeah, sure. It is.' I thought he was joking. So the next [illegible] everybody in the store was [illegible] yelling and trying to shake my hand, and the reality [illegible] I still couldn't believe I was a multimillionaire. I've heard a lot of people say that if they had it to do over again, they would have kept the money, but I [illegible] might be a big winner. America owes its existence to lotteries!

The lotteries so popular in the United States today were nothing new. Our American forefathers used them to raise money for numerous projects — and some of the lotteries were run by George Washington himself, an expert says.

Lotteries even helped finance the Colonial Army, the city of Washington, D.C., and Harvard, Yale and Princeton universities.

"Lotteries were everywhere during Colonial times and they were tremendously popular," said I. Nelson Rose, an authority on gambling and the law.

"Public lotteries were held to raise money to finance projects like new bridges and roads."

The first lottery tied to America took place in England in 1611 and raised money for the settlement of Jamestown, the first town established by the British in America. Later, the pre-Revolutionary government ran lotteries to finance an army in fight England.

Back in Colonial times, a whole new country had to be built — but there was hardly any way to tax citizens and there were very few lending institutions available, Rose said.

"They were building roads and bridges and canals and schools and they funded it to a great extent by running lotteries," the law professor said.

"Washington and Thomas Jefferson didn't view it as gambling at all. Jefferson wrote that it was simply a voluntary tax.

"Many of the fathers of the Revolution ran lotteries. Alexander Hamilton, the first Secretary of the Treasury, wrote about lotteries and John Hancock ran a lottery in Boston to raise money to construct a building.

"One of the lotteries that Washington ran was called the Mountain Road Lottery, held to raise funds to construct a road over the Allegheny Mountains with Virginia, where Washington had real estate."

George Washington

Washington was a lottery prize in 1768 that was worth about $900 in today's money. He won the equivalent of $250 in another lottery and a parcel of land as yet another.

"Probably the biggest lottery ever held back then was authorized by President Washington in 1793," Rose said.

But lottery fever ended in the 1820s after several lotteries collapsed and were unable to pay off winners, he said.

to build Washington, D.C.," Rose said.

"They sold 50,000 tickets at $7 each (about $150 in today's money). The top prize was a hotel worth $30,000 (about $650,000 in today's)."

SNEAKY BEACH PHOTOGS PUT NUDE WOMEN ON THE WEB — & THE GALS DON'T EVEN KNOW IT!

By MIKE FOSTER / Weekly World News

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Snooping shutterbugs are secretly videotaping topless sunbathers on the beaches of Miami — and then posting shots of the bare-breasted beauties on the Internet for millions to see!

The cunning cameramen rake in big bucks by selling the sizzling footage to websites, which charge sex-hungry guys $20 a month to ogle the nearly naked beach bunnies.

The high-tech Peeping Toms get the eye-popping shots by hiding on rooftops of buildings along South Beach, where topless sunbathing is allowed, then zooming in on unsuspecting gals.

"These women aren't paid for their appearances, but the website publishers are making a fortune from their images," David Bernstein, vice president of a leading adult-industry publication, told the New York Post.

"Right now, voyeur sites are the biggest thing on the Internet. The adult web business is a billion-dollar industry."

South Beach attracts many tourists from Europe, where people are blase about topless sunbathing. So a lot of American women consider it a safe haven, where they can whip off their bikini tops without being stared at by perverts.

Some locals are outraged to learn that millions of strange men across the country are gawking at their naked chests without permission.

"I can't stand the thought of some creepy loser slobbering over my picture," said a 25-year-old gift shop employee named Carrie, who visits the beach often and usually drops her top.

Most of the sly videographers choose the middle of the day, when the beaches are packed with buxom sun worshippers, their bodies glistening from sweat in the roasting Florida heat.

But one beach-cam operator, who asked to remain nameless, said that he prefers to go in the early morning.

'Good old days' were crawling with insects!

Folks in the "good old days" were overrun by insects.

"The good old days were terribly pest ridden," says entomologist Dr. James Sargent. "A hundred years ago people were dying and suffering from various diseases carried by insects in America.

VIRUS

ROME — That deadly new brain virus that has been making headlines worldwide could not have originated on Earth — and could only come from Hell, a controversial researcher claims.

The VY-261 virus, which eats its way through the human brain "like a rat tunneling through a slab of cheese," and has confounded scientists searching for a cure, contains molecules never before encountered on Earth.

But what is more astonishing, every specimen is precisely identical — meaning it could not be a product of natural evolution.

"I have concluded that VY-261 is not of this Earth — nor is it of extraterrestrial origin," declared Dr. Roberto Cassini, who has been analyzing the virus since it first surfaced in Rwanda in 1997.

"It appears that Satan has unleashed one of the deadly plagues described in the Bible's Book of Revelation."

The VY-261 virus, ironically, was dubbed "the Devil's Germ" after it was first encountered when it raced through several African villages two summers ago. It snuffed out at least 450 lives in little over a week there, and has since spread to at least 2,500 other victims in the region and has been detected in isolated cases in Munich, London, Paris and Los Angeles.

Horribly, sufferers usually go mad and attack each other before succumbing. Experts believe the virus heads straight for the personality center of the brain and seizes control.

Dr. Cassini says the uncanny perfection of each sample suggests that the virus is of supernatural origin, not animal or organic. "Even snowflakes are not absolutely identical," he said.

But the clincher is evidence that the virus show traces of contact with demonlike beings.

"Certain viruses pick up pieces of own genetic structure," explained Dr. Cassini, a respected microbiologist.

"Examining the virus under an electron microscope, I found genetic material consistent with the creation of horns and Satanic, skull-like features.

"This suggests that a previous host of the virus was a horned humanoid — a demon."

How the highly contagious killer virus was introduced to the human population remains a mystery. But Dr. Cassini believes that Satan's sex demons — known as incubi — may be spreading the disease to women.

A scientist from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention pooh-poohed the notion that VY-261 is carried by demons, declaring, "There is no evidence supporting such a claim."

But Bible scholars say it's not too farfetched to believe that a virus from the bowels of Hell would be released in our world deliberately.

"I am not surprised to learn that Satan has resorted to germ warfare," said Bishop Renato Tomasi.

"The battle of Armageddon will be waged with every weapon of mass destruction at the combatants' disposal, including biological weapons as well as nuclear weapons."

Workaholics are the best lovers ... say experts

Hardworking men make the best lovers, say experts.

The ability to make a commitment to a job is definitely connected with the ability to be committed to a relationship, declares psychiatrist Calvin Chen of a major university.

It's a myth that hardworking men are cold, unfeeling, too concerned with making money, and that they're insensitive and unemotional marriage partners, according to both Dr. Chen and psychiatrist Harold Voth.

By MICHAEL K. TODD
Weekly World News

"Hardworking men often have the most loving natures," said Dr. Voth.

"The man who can commit himself to a job is usually truly involved with life and is generous, not only with his time and effort, but also with those close to him. He is willing to 'give' of himself — to his employer and to his wife and family. There is a direct relationship between the ability to work hard and the ability to love. Both require patience, commitment and perseverance."

A recent Harvard study of some 500 men found that those who worked hard also had the best mental health, had achieved the highest levels of maturity and demonstrated the best capacity to love, said Dr. Voth.

"Hardworking men were shown to be extremely competent in personal relationships as well.

"They truly enjoyed their children, relationships with family and workmates, had large networks of friends, and participated more than others in a variety of group activities.

"The more competent they were on the job, the more likely they were to be equally competent as marital partners."

Men who want to "goof off" and just work hard enough to get by can't maintain a long-term relationship, Dr. Voth warned. "They just don't have what it takes to keep a woman happy.

"They're more interested in 'getting' than 'giving' and are neither very lovable nor loving."

Dr. Voth concluded by saying: "The woman married to a hardworking man should consider herself extremely lucky."

Tattoo parlor sued for $25,000 after misspelling 'villain' on man's arm

ROSEVILLE, Mich. — Ex-Marine Lee Williams has sued a tattoo parlor for $25,000, claiming the tattoo artist misspelled the word "villain" when he inscribed it on his right forearm.

A student at Wayne State University, Williams didn't realize the word was incorrectly spelled as "villan" until a friend pointed fun at him a few days later, according to the suit filed in Macomb County Court.

Apparently an employee at Eternal Tattoos, Inc., couldn't decide how to spell the word and used guesswork instead of a dictionary, said Williams' lawyer Paul Clark.

Williams, 23, filed suit against the tattoo parlor for damages and to recover the cost of plastic surgery to cover up the mistake.

Find Beauty, Femininity and Seduction with LAST DEPIL ACTION

How does LAST DEPIL ACTION work?

It combines 2 hyper-active natural ingredients mixed in a unique serum. The first ingredient is Monoi oil to hydrate and soften the skin. The second ingredient is an authentic "definitive-anti-regrowth" genuine formula which eliminates immediately and perfectly all unwanted hair. Thanks to its principal ingredients (living enzymes) that directly attack the bulb of the hair eliminating the root without irritating the skin), it removes the hair permanently without the risk of regrowth.

WHAT A SAVINGS OF TIME AND MONEY!

LAST DEPIL ACTION is guaranteed and certified:
- by the laboratory (under normal medical standards)
- by medical specialists (verified for efficiency).

NO MORE HAIR UNDER YOUR ARMS. YOUR SKIN WILL APPEAR SOFTER AND WILL GOOGNE YOUR TICKET TO SEDUCTION!
"We've been 3 months since I've used LAST DEPIL ACTION and I'm astonishingly amazed, not one hair has regrown since. What a relief! Among my friends I have used LAST DEPIL ACTION with the same excellent results..." Gisèle B (Paris)
